

John Kelly is down in the south, and he is also down in the mouth.

Rhode Island did well. It sent its best man—Jonathan Chase—to the senate.

Sister Theresa, a niece of James G. Blaine, died at Wilkesbarre, Pennsylvania, yesterday.

The democrats will probably succeed in their attack upon the treasury surplus. They will either steal it or vote it away.

New York sends greetings to Wisconsin: We have sent our best gift to the senate, and shake, because you have done likewise.

The Rev. J. M. Newman, of Ripon, has received a call to the pastorate of Congregational church in Washington at a salary of $4,000.

Some of the Fairchild papers feel pretty hard. But they will feel better when they see what a man Spooner will make of himself in the senate.

The more we have of such men as John C. Spooner in high places, the prouder will be our politics, and the stronger will be the republican party.

The dastardly scheme that some of the papers entered into to make the people believe that Colonel Spooner was bound hand and foot to the railway corporations, did not succeed. Dishonest schemes of that character, seldom do succeed.

Mrs. E. H. Green, of Vermont, is the richest woman in America. She has $20,000,000 in bonds, and is so stingy that she will walk to parties, and from the depot to her house, rather than hire a carriage. She made her money by speculation.

Here is an argument for high license: The operation of the Harper high license law has increased the yearly revenues of Ohio from $250,000 to $3,500,000 on licenses alone, and in the entire state of Illinois has increased the revenue from receipts from $700,000 to more than $4,000,000 annually.

General Grant's memoirs are to include reminiscences of the Mexican war as well as of the great war. It is likely that the volume will be finished within the coming three months. Fred Grant said in New York Monday that his father had recovered entirely from the trouble with the tongue. But it seems that Fred Grant has not recovered from the trouble with his tongue. It has been used over much at late and not in a good direction.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe has appealed to the United States exposition commissioners at New Orleans to place in her hands the $50,000 appropriated for her department, of which sum she has only been able to obtain so far $3,000 from the management. For want of money Mrs. Howe has been compelled to curtail the original designs for the exhibits, and her landlady is threatening to discontinue her property for her board. This is more evidence that unless the government or somebody else does something for the exposition, it will be a total failure.

Antonia from Washington: "Democratic members of congress are very slow to take a hint when it relates to spoils. A bill in relation to consular courts, which, if passed, would give Mr. Arthur a chance to name several judges, came up in the house. It has been adopted by the senators, who discussed it exhaustively. But yesterday Mr. S. C. Cox suggested that the house would better wait until the new administration came in. That was all that was needed. Action on the bill was immediately deferred."

The committee on pensions in the United States senate has favorably reported the bill to place upon then pension rolls the name of Margaret C. Halpine, widow of Lieutenant Colonel Halpine, the author of the war songs which appeared under the nom de plume of "Private Miles O'Reilly." His death was due to an overdose of chloroform, taken to alleviate suffering caused by military service. But the same committee refused to report favorably on the bill granting a pension to Mrs. DeLoach, whose husband died in the attempt to find the North pole for the government.

The best triumph of the best element in politics, lately witnessed in this country, is shown in the election of Wm. M. Everts, of New York, to the United States senate. In his election is an evidence that the republican party in the Empire state is cleaving itself; and patriotic republicans of sister states whose state organizations have not yet begun the work of self-cleansing, have reason to be encouraged. In the success in New York of honest popular sentiment over political maneuvering and bargaining, is the earnest of like reform in other states. Wisconsin included.—Evening Wisconsin.

The Gazette is glad to inform the Evening Wisconsin, that the republican legislature of Wisconsin has followed the wise example of the republican legislature of New York. Brains and the best element have triumphed in both states.

A Washington dispatch says that the prevailing idea with democrats down there seems to be that they can, with little effort, make Wisconsin a democratic state, and that nothing would have more influence in that direction than the elevation of a prominent person to the cabinet. Mr. Vilas seems to have no rival in that connection. He is described by his friends here as "just the sort of a man Cleveland likes." It will be a cold day when the democrats make a democratic state of Wisconsin. They tried that last fall; and Vilas promised to deliver the state to Cleveland, but it was a failure. Vilas doesn't own the state, neither can he nor his friends, manufacture a democratic state out of Wisconsin.

COLONEL SPOONER NOMINATED.

Wisdom triumphed in the republican senatorial caucus at Madison on Wednesday evening, and Colonel Spooner was nominated on the first ballot by a vote 54 to 25. This is an exceedingly happy issue out of the senatorial contest, and one that will cause great rejoicing among the republicans of Rock county. They have a profound respect for General Fairchild, and honor him for the distinguished services he has rendered the country, but weighing the circumstances which surrounded the senatorial question, and especially when considering the fact that a democratic administration was coming into power, they wisely concluded that Wisconsin would be better represented in the senate by Colonel Spooner than by General Fairchild, and for these reasons the Rock county delegation was prompted to give Spooner its support, a course which was strongly backed by the popular sentiment among all republican in the county.

The republicans of the Wisconsin legislature have done well. They have listened to the voice of the people. They have responded to the demand that solid young manhood, unflinching courage, conspicuous ability and unshaken integrity, shall be sent to the senate. They have called a young man to that high place, who has heart, conscience, brains and wisdom enough to dignify that office, honor his state, do his party a valuable service, and make the opposition pay attention. Now that Senator Cameron goes out of the senate, that is the kind of a man they want there and they will send such a one.

When Colonel Spooner was called before the Tuesday night caucus which did him the honor of naming him for the senate, he said: "If I am elected all the strength, all the ability, and all the vigor, which God has given me will be given to the people of Wisconsin." Of course, it will. John Spooner will never go back on the people of Wisconsin. He will never go back on himself. He will never disappoint those who trusted in his honor and gave him their votes. He will stand up like a little giant for his state and for the principles of his party, and no man of the opposition can silence his voice or break down his courage. He will not falter at any time, and will be so devoted to the service of the people that the people will shower upon him their confidence and respect.

ABOUT ELECTION PRESIDENTS.

In the North American Review for February are five short and interesting papers on the subject of "How shall the president be elected?" They are contributed by President Barnard, of Columbia college, Mr. William Purcell, the democratic editor of Rochester, who visited Cleveland, and by Senators Daves, of Massachusetts, and Vance, of North Carolina, and Roger A. Pryor, of New York city. After every presidential campaign, somebody feels constrained to write a magazine or a review article on how the president shall be elected, and congress, also, discusses the question, but nothing ever comes of the articles on the discussion.

President Barnard favors the election of the president by congress. He shows that this method was the choice of the ablest men, and, doubtless, of a majority of the convention which formed the constitution, though they were led to adopt electoral system as a compromise, and upon a theory to which that system, as perverted by our custom of dictating the action of the electors, has completely failed to respond.

Mr. Purcell would abolish the electoral system, and have a direct vote by the people for president and vice-president, but preserve the autonomy of the states and their proportions of power as measured by representation in congress. Thus, the candidate having the largest number of votes in a state should have counted for him as many presidential votes as each state has representatives in congress.

Senator Daves does not regard the abolition of the electoral system as important, but urges the necessity of legislation carefully defining who shall determine what persons have been appointed electors, who shall decide what are certificates of election and which are genuine and which false ones, and if this action is to be performed by the two houses of congress, whether it shall be accomplished by them separately or in joint convention. At present there is no tribunal to decide a contested election of electors. Senator Daves also is in favor of declaring the candidate for president who secures a plurality of electoral votes elected, restricting an election by the house of representatives to cases only where there is a tie in the electoral college.

Mr. Pryor, (who became noted for his challenge to a duel with John F. Potter, of this state) would have a direct vote by the people, and the election determined strictly by the popular voice. He even criticizes the present system of allowing each state two electoral votes without reference to its population, besides one for each member of congress, as "standing for nothing but the sterile abstraction of state sovereignty."

Senator Vance also is contented with the existing system. He is opposed to making an election depend on the aggregate popular vote without reference to states, and he satisfies himself with the more form into which the electoral college has degenerated by recalling the fact that the Romans, in ancient times, kept up the office of consul when its functions had been usurped by the senators and it had ceased to have any real authority.

So, it will be seen, that this is a fruitless discussion, as nothing new has been suggested by these five writers.

RIGHT IN OUR MIDST.

IF ST. LOUIS DOCTORS ARE NOT BADLY MISTAKEN,

The Asiatic Scourge Has Arrived and Begun Business—Two Deaths in the Bridge City District to Have Been Caused by Cholera.

St. Louis, Jan. 22.—Last Sunday morning Wolff Pickner, a Russian Jew, peddler, who had been in the city ten days, was taken sick with vomiting, cramps and diarrhea. The man was sent to the city hospital, where he died in about two hours. The attending physicians say that all the symptoms of the cholera were present, the doleful and different stages of the disease being well marked, but to allay public fear a certificate of cholera, or native cholera, was returned. Little is known of Pickner's history, but he is said to have come to St. Louis from New York by way of New Orleans. He was 35 years of age and lived in a family in New York. A second case is that of George W. Evans, a colored man, who was taken sick in the same manner. Dr. Mudd was called to see the case and pronounced it cholera, but wishing to have his judgment confirmed sent for Dr. Dossett to examine the case, and his diagnosis was confirmed. Evans died the same afternoon and was buried in haste, and his clothing and bedding burned. Evans lived in a laundry and had always enjoyed robust health.

It is said that bacilli have already been found. A post-mortem examination was held right away on the body of the Russian peddler and Dr. Dear, of the City hospital, gives it as his solemn belief that the man died of genuine cholera. The body was not given to the man's friends, but was buried secretly and hurriedly. The negro was employed as a laborer in a laundry and had always enjoyed robust health.

THE OKLAHOMA CAMPAIGN.

Latest News from the United States Forces—Talk in Congress.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 22.—Gen. Augur, in a dispatch to Secretary Lincoln concerning the removal of intruders from the Indian territory, says that on the 14th instant Gen. Hatch was ordered to remove the intruders without violence if possible, and for this purpose he was given seven troops of cavalry and one company of infantry, which force Gen. Augur telegraphs he thinks sufficient. He also states that Couch, the Oklahoma agent, is a fair, and is willing to risk a campaign, and that the public sympathy and compel favorable congressional action.

Under date of Jan. 15, Gen. Augur telegraphs that Gen. Hatch is beyond the reach of the telegraph. He states that the intruders claim they are advised by lawyers, and by members of congress that they are in the right, and may lawfully resist removal. The particular question under consideration in the house Wednesday was a provision to secure a certain title to the government of a strip of land containing about 151,000 acres, subject to a treaty made in 1853, which is now occupied by two tribes of Indians. It is not proposed to disturb the Indians occupying that district, but to pay the sum of $40,000, which is due from the government to the Creek tribe for the land upon which the Sacs and Foxes located. Burns, of Missouri, Kettler, of Ohio, and others insisted on the right of the settler to move into Oklahoma, which is now in the possession of the encroaching companies. Mr. Rogers, of Arkansas, said three decisions of the federal courts had been recorded against the right of occupation by whites. Burns referred to a square mile, covered with the heads of cattle, which was a dead carcass in the eye of the law.

FIXING THE POSTOFFICES.

An Alleged Scheme Between Republicans and Democrats.

BOSTON, Jan. 22.—A Washington special to The Transcript says: It has been developed in the postoffice department that certain Republican postmasters whose commissions expire between this and March 4, or during the few months thereafter, are entering into a regular bargain with certain Democrats in their districts to succeed them by their immediate resignation, thus trying to dictate the appointment of their successors by the postmaster general. The programme is to get prominent Democrats in these districts, with the aid of the Democratic member of congress, to recommend the appointment of the party bargained with.

Postmaster General Hutton, however, has positively refused to lend himself to such business, and says that the Republican who surrenders his position should be the first that the new administration should remove, and that as far as his influence will have any effect, he will take great pleasure in pointing them out to his successor. For the future of his term he proposes to appoint Republicans and not Democrats to the vacancies that may occur hereafter.

Selling the Cannibal Furniture. PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 22.—An inquisitive crowd was present in Infantry Army hall Wednesday morning, and a rare sight was witnessed, the general and cabinet members of the government, from the furniture transformed into a great furniture warehouse, every part of the hall being filled with choice articles which at one time adorned the magnificent residence of William Sprague, at Cambridge. At noon the hall presented a busy scene, as crowds of business men were present, and every one seemed desirous of purchasing some article to have as a souvenir, paying nearly double the value. The ladies bid freely on the choice sets, and as a rule the larger articles brought good prices. Many of the goods were damaged badly, especially the carpets, which were moth-eaten.

Death of James G. Blaine's Niece. WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 22.—Sister Theresa, mother superior in St. Mary's Roman Catholic convent, died Wednesday afternoon, having been afflicted with tubercular meningitis. She was a niece of James G. Blaine, and before retiring to a religious life her name was Nellie Walker.

Gunning, of the firm of Crosby & Gunning, of New York, Buffalo and Chicago, who was charged with illegal voting at the fall election, has been honorably discharged by the United States grand jury here, they holding that the prosecution was malicious.

Garland Goes to See Cleveland Again. WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 22.—It is understood here that Senator Garland has been called to another conference with President elect Cleveland. He left Washington quietly Tuesday, and it was given out that he had gone to his home in Arkansas, but it is now stated that he went to Albany. Some senators go so far as to say they think the senator from Arkansas has been taken into Mr. Cleveland's confidence, and has gone to Albany to confer with Mr. Cleveland regarding the construction of the cabinet.

And So a Runaway Girl Doesn't Appreciate Anything Very Pleasant.

New York, Jan. 22.—The Grand View hotel in this city was on Monday the scene of a highly sensational episode. Miss Addie Stiger is the daughter of Mr. John Stiger, president of the Anna Water-Ski company. He is rich, and the family live in an elegant suite of rooms in the Grand View hotel. Mr. Stiger is well known in Wall street, and is the owner of the real estate exchange. Miss Addie has a fortune of her own, which she inherited some time ago on the death of her mother. The young lady is a prepossessing blonde, tall and rather slight. Two years ago she met Gus C. Rudolph, then son of City Surveyor Jacob Rudolph. Young Mr. Rudolph has for several years been his father's assistant and chief clerk. The acquaintance of the young people developed into an attachment. Over a year ago they became engaged, and Miss Stiger announced the event to her father. Mr. Stiger, it is said, was very much displeased when he heard of it. He was an American, he said, and no daughter of his should marry a foreigner. The family were probably all right, he said, and no doubt the son was also, but his daughter should marry an American or not at all.

The young people, however, continued their meetings and attended parties and the theatre together. On last Sunday Mr. Stiger visited New Brunswick, N. J. He told Miss Addie that he would return on the following evening. On his arrival on Monday night he found all the furniture removed from the rooms, and on the mantel was the following note:

My Dear Father: When you receive this Gus and I will be married. I could not be happy without him. Forgive me. Come to see at our new home, 316 East Fifty-seventh street.

The furniture, including a grand piano, which Miss Addie had had, was her own property. It having been sold to her by her father, she said.

The father is furious. He refuses to see the young couple, and threatens all sorts of dire consequences. As the young lady is of age, however, and rich in her own right, it is not probable that anything very unpleasant will happen.

THE GREAT WHITE SHAFT.

Facts From the Report of the Washington Monument Association.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 22.—The annual report of the Washington Monument association calls for $165,000 to finish the obelisk, and strongly recommends the appropriation of that sum. The total amount expended so far to complete the shaft externally has been $1,157,710. A long history of the construction of the monument is embodied in the report. The total weight of the structure is given as 3,500 tons. The present plan upon the top of the foundation, nowhere exceeds nine tons per square foot, and is less than three tons per square foot near the outer edges of the foundation. Since the completion of the monument in 1884, 34,344 tons have been added to the weight of the structure, and the settlement due to this weight is as follows: Southwest corner, about 2.2 inches; southeast corner, same; northeast corner, about 2.2 inches; northwest corner, about 2.2 inches.

The two north corners of the monument, it has been discovered, were the first to settle. This is due to the fact that the proximity of a pond just north of the structure. It is therefore recommended that the pond be filled to the level of the banks.

Allen Land-Owners.

WASHINGTON CITY, Jan. 22.—In his report on a bill to prevent alienism from purchasing public lands, Congressman Oates says that European noblemen, mainly Englishmen, have bought about 20,000,000 acres of land in the United States, and that a considerable number of unfilled alien lands have bought lands. This alien, non-resident ownership, he says, "will in the course of time lead to a system of landownership incompatible with the interests and free institutions of the United States. The foundation for such a system is being laid broadly in the western states and territories. A considerable number of the country are to become tenants and herdsmen on the vast possessions of their foreign lords until contracts made and entered into before they sell the land to the natives. The interests of European capitalists have caused them to invest many millions in American railroad bonds, covering perhaps 100,000,000 acres, the greatest part of which, under foreclosure sales, will next likely, be sold to many years, become the property of these foreign bondholders, in addition to their present princely possessions."

HAINES STEPS DOWN.

ONE PHASE OF THE ILLINOIS DIFFICULTY ENDED.

The House Left, However, with the Contest Still in Hand—A Tie Vote and Haines as the Arbitrer of the Question.

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 22.—The house began its session Tuesday morning with doubt and mystery giving interest to its proceedings. It proved a dull day. Up to 6 o'clock in the evening not one session had been held. It was a day of commotion and roll-calls. The pending motion by Fuller, declaring that the speaker should not send the senate and governor notification of the house's action, was carried with 73 affirmative votes. The Haines people then came to the front with a scheme to rescind the resolution. The permanent organization of the house, but a rebuttal was met with at the first step. Craft's motion to adopt the rules of the last assembly being lost, Langer and O'Donnell voting with the Republicans, as they continued to do throughout the day.

A motion by Fuller that the house proceed to organize by the election of officers was decided by Haines to be not germane. Fuller during the discussion, quoted what he said was eminent parliamentary authority, and Haines asked him what the authority was. Upon being answered "Haines look on parliamentary law," the speaker declared that the resolution was not authority in the Illinois legislature.

Both sides then spent some hours in trying to get the advantage, the Republicans desiring a positive vote declaring the permanent organization to be the only thing in order, and the Democrats trying to obtain a recognition of their man. To all this Crafts introduced a resolution and moved its reading and passage. It was a voluminous document and the Republicans sought to prevent its reading, but the speaker decided it in order. The resolution proved to be a bill relating to drainage, and its reading consumed two or three hours, the Republicans among themselves insisting with cat-calls and "Sweep House" that the speaker should not read it.

From 6 o'clock to 11 p. m. one motion followed another, amid considerable confusion. Haines, at the latter hour, got the floor, and said:

The chair is of opinion that we can arrive at a solution of this difficulty. It seems that the chair is the objective point of the problem. The movement of this chair was decided by Haines to be not germane. Fuller during the discussion, quoted what he said was eminent parliamentary authority, and Haines asked him what the authority was. From 6 o'clock to 11 p. m. one motion followed another, amid considerable confusion. Haines, at the latter hour, got the floor, and said:

The chair is of opinion that we can arrive at a solution of this difficulty. It seems that the chair is the objective point of the problem. The movement of this chair was decided by Haines to be not germane. Fuller during the discussion, quoted what he said was eminent parliamentary authority, and Haines asked him what the authority was. Upon being answered "Haines look on parliamentary law," the speaker declared that the resolution was not authority in the Illinois legislature.

Both sides then spent some hours in trying to get the advantage, the Republicans desiring a positive vote declaring the permanent organization to be the only thing in order, and the Democrats trying to obtain a recognition of their man. To all this Crafts introduced a resolution and moved its reading and passage. It was a voluminous document and the Republicans sought to prevent its reading, but the speaker decided it in order. The resolution proved to be a bill relating to drainage, and its reading consumed two or three hours, the Republicans among themselves insisting with cat-calls and "Sweep House" that the speaker should not read it.
